APPRENTICESHIP PROGRAMS

Apprenticeship programs provide individuals with the opportunity for skills training that would be required of them to become Journeypersons in construction, industrial, motive power and service industries. To become an apprentice, you must first become employed in the trade. Your employer will determine when they are ready to sponsor you as an apprentice.

Apprentices form a nucleus of skilled workers for business and industry.

Apprenticeship training may last from two to five years, depending on the trade. In most apprenticeship occupations, about 90 percent of the training is conducted in the workplace. This on-the-job training is supplemented by training conducted at a College of Applied Arts and Technology.

All applicants wishing to pursue apprenticeship programs must sign a 3-part agreement between the apprentice, their employer and the:
